ESTABLISHMENT AND MODIFICATION OF NATIONAL FOREST BOUNDARIES A CHRONOLOGIC RECORD

1891 - 1996

ESTABLISHMENT OF THE NATIONAL FOREST SYSTEM A Brief History

The National Forest System (NFS) was started when the Nation's public land policy moved from the disposition to the conservation era. The concept of reserving Federal lands for National Forest purposes in the late 1800's was driven by the need to protect lands from indiscriminate grazing and timber-cutting. Passage of two laws dealing with reservation of Federal lands, Section 24 of the Act of March 30, 1891, and the organic provisions of the 1897 Act, followed two decades of congressional debate of over 200 bills on public land policy. Section 24 of the 1891 Act was commonly referred to as the Forest Reserve Act of 1891 and the organic provisions in the 1897 Act are commonly referred to by the Forest Service as the Organic Administration Act.

The first National Forest, the Yellowstone Park Timber Land Reserve (mostly within the Shoshone National Forest) in Wyoming, was established by proclamation dated March 30, 1891, and signed by President Benjamin Harrison under Section 24 of the Act of March 3, 1891, 26 Stat. 1103. He also signed proclamations creating 14 additional reservations for a gross acreage of 13 million acres.

President James Cleveland created 15 more reserves, with a gross acreage of 25.8 million acres. Thirteen of the those 15 forest reserves were created by President Cleveland just before he left office, generating spirited debate and congressional attempts to restore them to the public domain. Even though the Yellowstone was the first forest reservation in the United States, it is not the oldest. Approximately fifteen years before the Yellowstone was created, the Spanish Crown created a Federal Forest Reserve in Puerto Rico which later (established January 17, 1903) became a part of the Luquillo Forest Reserve and now part of the Caribbean National Forest.

President Theodore Roosevelt, while not responsible for creating the first forest reserves, deserves his reputation as the pioneer in conserving America's natural resources. He emphasized conservation in lieu of exploitation. He was responsible for setting aside and reserving many more millions of acres of public lands for National Forests than did his predecessors. National Forests established during his Presidency make up the bulk of the 162,820,984 acres of existing National Forests that were set aside and reserved from the public domain.

Although the 1891 Act gave the President authority to create Forest Reserves, provisions for administration of the Reserves were not enacted until Congress provided the organic provisions in the Act of March 4, 1897. Under the 1897 Act, the Secretary of the Interior was charged with the administration of the Forest Reserves. These duties, with the exception of certain land disposal authorities, were turned over to the Secretary of Agriculture by the Transfer Act of February 1, 1905. The Receipts Act of March 4, 1907, changed the name of Forest Reserves to National Forests and withdrew the President's authority to create National Forests in certain western states.

A Brief History

The public policy of the Federal Government acquiring lands for protection and administration gained impetus in the eastern states between 1905 and 1908. During this period, eastern lumber companies holding large blocks of cutover lands wanted the opportunity to sell their land holdings to the United States. Public concern was increasing over logging, mining, and farming on fragile watershed lands. In response to the need to stabilize watershed conditions, Congress enacted the Weeks Act of March 1, 1911. The Weeks Act provided for the purchase of lands in the watershed of navigable streams for watershed protection and timber production and provided authority for the Secretary of Agriculture to designate such lands for permanent retention as National Forests. Eastern land purchases under the Weeks Act peaked prior to World War II.

During the 1920s and 1930s, agricultural problems were being caused by the cultivation of large blocks of submarginal farm land that could not profitably grow crops. Personal hardships were commonplace and severe droughts, floods, erosion, poor cultivation practices, neglect, and frequently abandonment were damaging the land. Because of the extent of the problems, the Secretary of Agriculture set up a National Conference on Land Utilization (LU) in 1931. Under subsequent emergency relief and industrial recovery acts in the early 1930s and the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act of 1937, a total of 11.3 million acres in 253 LU project areas were acquired through voluntary sales to the United States by the end of the acquisition program in 1946. Many of these Federal lands were transferred to a variety of other Federal and State agencies for management as forests, grassland pastures and ranges, park and recreation areas, and wildlife management areas. From 1938 to 1954, the Soil Conservation Service administered the LU areas retained by the Secretary of Agriculture except for 1 million acres assigned to the Forest Service. On January 2, 1954, the Secretary of Agriculture assigned all of the approximately 8.8 million acres of LU project lands to the Forest Service for management under provisions of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act of 1937. Since that time, an additional 3.5 million acres were transferred to other Federal and State agencies, 1.5 million acres were given National Forest status, and 3.8 million acres were permanently set aside as National Grasslands. A record of the establishment and disposition of the LU projects, and establishment of National Grasslands accompanies this document.

The Land and Water Conservation Fund (L&WCF) Act of 1965 stemmed from the Outdoor Recreation Review Commission's recommendation to provide additional public outdoor recreation land. The Act earmarks, subject to appropriation, receipts from offshore oil, sale of surplus property, and recreation user fees, for Federal and State land purchases "to assist in preserving, developing and assuring accessibility to all citizens of the United States of America of present and future generations...such quality and quantity of outdoor recreation resources as may be desirable for individual active participation." The L&WCF is currently the primary method of funding Forest Service land purchases.

A summary of the NFS lands is updated annually in Table 1 of the "Land Areas of the National Forest System" (FS-383) report entitled National and Regional Areas Summary.

Preface

This compilation has been made in recognition of the need for a convenient reference list of the authentic governmental actions under which the individual National Forests were established, their boundaries subsequently modified, or their status altered. It provides a comprehensive, chronologic list of official actions affecting Federal Forest Reserves and National Forests, citing the supporting documents required to trace the legal history of each to November 1996. Land exchanges, donations, and transfers affecting the National Forest boundaries are not cited because of the number of actions and the complexity of assembling accurate data. Many forests are grouped together for administration, but have not been officially consolidated. These changes are not listed here. Research and experimental areas are also not listed here.

Following the Chronologic Record and Index is Exhibit 1 which includes a listing of special boundary extension authorities with an alphabetical index of the National Forests. The listing also provides reference to the citations on which actions affecting a particular National Forest are cited.

Enclosed also are 4 addenda. Addendum 1 discusses the purpose and creation of land utilization projects. Addendum 2 lists the national grasslands and land utilization projects within the NFS designated by the Secretary of Agriculture. Addendum 3 summarizes the lands transferred to states with public use reservations. Addendum 4 lists the lands transferred in land utilization projects from the Department of Agriculture to other federal departments made prior to assumption of jurisdiction by the Forest Service and without specific reversionary provisions.

LAND UTILIZATION PROJECTS

ADDENDUM 1

Purpose and How Created

In 1934 under an Executive Order, President Roosevelt set up funds in the Federal Emergency Relief Administration for a submarginal land purchase program. The plan called for the purchase of submarginal agricultural land to be retired from production and made available for Indian, park, forest, migratory bird refuge and agricultural adjustment purposes. Provision was made for improving the areas as purchased through Public Works that the lands might be put to the highest use to which they were best suited.

In June 1935 all of this activity was transferred to the Resettlement Administration. On January 1, 1937, the Resettlement Administration was transferred to the Department of Agriculture and given the designation, the Farm Security Administration. Prior to this transfer, all lands earmarked for park purposes had been turned over to the Park Service, Department of the Interior, for administration. On July 22, 1937, the Bankhead-Jones Act was passed and administration of the Act placed in the Bureau of Agricultural Economics and on June 9, 1938, the balance of these lands was transferred by Executive Order to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics for administration under Title III. With the reorganization of the Department of Agriculture in October 1938, the administration was again shifted to the Soil Conservation Service (SCS). Title III of this Act furnished the first basic legislation covering the purchase and development of submarginal farm land.

Under Section 31, Title III of the Bankhead-Jones Act stated, "[T]he Secretary is authorized and directed to develop a program of land conservation and land utilization, including the retirement of lands which are submarginal or not primarily suitable for cultivation, in order thereby to correct inadjustment in land use, and thus assist in controlling soil erosion, reforestation, preserving natural resources, mitigating floods, preventing impairment of dams and reservoirs, conserving surface and subsurface moisture, protecting the watersheds of navigable streams, and protecting the public lands, health, safety, and welfare." Bankhead-Jones Title III Lands, (50 Stat. 522, 525; 56 Stat. 725; 7 U.S.C. 1011, et seq.)

Most of the Title III land was acquired under authorities other than the above Act, but was given Title III status by Executive Orders 7908, 10046, and others. These orders were based on the authority contained in 7 U.S.C. 1019, which section has been repealed.

The administration of Title III lands was transferred from SCS to the Forest Service on December 24, 1953, effective January 2, 1954, 19 Federal Register (FR) 74 at 75. Most Title III lands are now included in the National Grasslands, which are a part of the National Forest System. See regulations at 36 C.F.R. 213. Some Title III lands are now included in the National Forests; some are still administered by the Forest Service as land utilization projects; some have been conveyed to states and other public authorities; some have been transferred to other government departments; some are under contract of sale or lease to states; small areas are administered by SCS, 19 FR 467; and small areas are administered by Agricultural Research Service.

Title III lands may be conveyed or leased, with or without a consideration, but only to public authorities and only on condition that the property is used for public purposes (7 U.S.C. 1011c). This condition is enforced by placing a reversionary provision in the deed from the United States. Title III lands may be exchanged to public authorities, as above stated, or it may be exchanged to public authorities or private parties under the proviso in 7 U.S.C. 1011c without a reversion if land of approximately equal value is received in exchange by the United States.

Reservations: Until 7 U.S.C. 1018 was repealed, in any conveyance, by sale, gift, or exchange, the United States was required to reserve at least three-fourths of the minerals owned by it. For years, it was the policy to reserve all minerals, except in some conveyances to states.

In an exchange involving both acquired land and public domain land, it is necessary to show separately the land received in exchange for the public domain land, and the land received in exchange for the acquired land. Land received in exchange for public domain land acquires public domain status. This is based on the reasoning in 40 Attorney General 260.

The reservation of minerals, timber, or other rights in conveyances to the United States, should be subjected to the appropriate regulations of the Secretary.

The above is not a complete history of Title III lands. It is intended to show how Title III lands came into being, the types of transfers, acquisitions, and dispositions that have been made, and how the lands are now administered. Addendums 2 through 4 will show the projects that were transferred to Forest Service custody and control.
